

RAG Validation Guide v1.2

Page 1 of 1

RAG and LLM Validation Best Practices

When an LLM generates a response, it is critical to verify that the information is grounded in the provided source documents. This prevents hallucinations and ensures accuracy in enterprise settings.

Key Principle: If you cannot find the exact or very close supporting text in the source documents using a reliable search tool, treat the LLM output with caution or discard the unverified portion.